Abstract. We outline quantum models of circuit theory. There are several issues to be addressed ranging from network synthesis and dissipation (how to model resistance quantum mechanically). We set out the problems of modeling quantum communication and signal processing where the communication between systems via a non-Markovian channel. This is a general feature of quantum transmission lines. Our ultimate objective is to extend the networks rules that have been developed for Markovian models.